Cookies

National Consensus is committed to continually improving the web experience for our visitors. Currently, cookies are the most effective way to identify unique, anonymous visitors and their navigation during a visit. A “cookie” is a text file sent by a web server and stored in RAM while the browser is running so that it can be read back from that browser the next time a unique visitor returns to that web server. Companies commonly use cookies for online ordering systems, site personalization, and website tracking. Cookies allow the browser to “remember” specific information about the visitor, such as last visit, time spent, or user preferences (like style sheets). When visitors to the site experience a browser or HTML issue, cookies allow us to isolate their specific session in our visitor log files. This information helps to replicate the environment and isolate the problem. Cookies and registration are two methods that allow National Consensus to offer more features to repeat visitors/customers. National Consensus uses cookie information to understand usage patterns, to offer personalized features, or to isolate problems experienced by our users as they traverse our site. We do not use cookies for any other purpose. Cookies are terminated when a visitor ends their browser session. However, cookies may also be stored on your computer’s hard drive once you log off from our website.
